iQ CREDIT UNION HIRES BUSINESS DEVELOPMENT OFFICER

VANCOUVER, Wash. — iQ Credit Union has hired long-time Clark County nonprofit executive Wayne Clemetson as business development manager.

Clemetson moved to Vancouver from Eugene, Oregon in 1985 to become the executive director of the Clark County YMCA. During his tenure, he was instrumental in raising over $6 million for development of a new YMCA in Orchards. Prior to joining the credit union, he held a business development position at Bank of Clark County

A graduate of California State University Los Angeles, he is active in the community and has been the past president of Vancouver Rotary Club, member of the Vancouver Rotary Foundation, and involved in other Rotary District and International leadership and special events. Clemetson's volunteer and community board involvement includes work with YMCA Youth & Government, American Red Cross, Youth Outreach, Vancouver/Clark Parks & Recreation Foundation, Share, Inter-service Walk & Knock, Boy Scouts of America, Columbia Land Trust, and Educational Opportunities for Children & Families (EOCF), as well as consulting with numerous community not-for-profits on capital development programs. He resides in Clark County.
